"Railroads," he said, "are simply business investments. The mainagement of the affairs of the railroad companies simply endeavor to secure appropriate revenue returns for invested projectly in operation. If the expenses shall segrently exceed the returns, you will see and we feel sure as good business men will agree with us, that the only thing left for us to do under such circumsiances, would be to curtail expenses in the South, which would really mean a diminution of the transportation service, less frequent trains, less accommodations for passenger trafless accommodations for passenger traf-fic, generally speaking, throughout the South."

Joint Responsibility.

"There are from thirty-five to forty thousand employes on the Southern Railthousand employes on the Southera Itali-way supporting say about two hundred thousand people directly by the pay rolls of the company. This vast army of peo-ple in turn are patrons of you, gen-tlemen, and are supporting the people to whom you sell your goods. We deem it a joint responsibility of yourselves and curselves to see to it that this great array of worthy citizens of this section is not made uneasy in its present con-ditions on account of the apprehending calamitous conditions by reason of reductions in the number employed or the unt pald to those who are employed. amount paid to those who are employed."
Continuing, the speaker made the statement that whereas the chairman of the T. P. A.'s Railroad Committee had made the statement that the passenger trains of the Southern in Virginia were eatning $1.11 per mile, the fact is that the amount is $1.01, and that these figures represent the concentration of carriage through the State of Virginia and all of that interstate traffic. After noting the hard fight being made by the Southern in behalf of the Washington gateway to the South and what it is doing for ern in behalf of the Washington gateway to the South and what it is doing for this section, the T. P. A. should consider withdrawing its application for the two cent rate.

Coming down to the interchangeable mileage system, Mr. Hardwick asserted that his company was the first in the South to establish such a system, and that as the road grew, it was extended. "There are," went on Mr. Hardwick, "a number of individual roads in the South which do not engage in any interchangeable mileage arrangement, so that

"Speaking directly for the Southern Fallway Commany, we are most desirous Railway Company, we are most desirous to do all we can to advance the best interests of the commercial traveler and interests of the commercial traveler and all of our other patrons, but we feel that with all propriety and with all respect, the question of our co-partnership with other reads in the matter of interchangeable interline traffic is one which the Southern Railway should be allowed to decide, certainly so long as this decision does not in any way deal unfairly with the people. We feel that you, gentlemen, should not, certainly, at the present time, push this proposition further upon us."

What Crandall Said.

What Crandall Said.

F. W. Crandall, chairman of the National Railroad Committee, was appointed on the part of convention to question Mr. Hardwick, who cheerfully agreed to answer. Mr. Crandall made a statement, the purport of which was that the traveling man desires an interchangeable mileage book, so that in the Southeast he can with one book cover his territory, not taking into consideration the short lines. He said they wanted nothing from the Southern, more than done by other roads in other sections, where a thousand mile book could be secured at a cost of $50 with a rebate of $10. Mr. Crahdall asserted that there is really no interchangeable mileage in the Southeast, but a system mileage, which does not fill all requirements. Mr. Crandall in closing, said to Mr. Hardwick that if any conservative body of men would dead to the the contents. any conservative body of men would de-cide that the T. P. A. was intenson-able in that it asked of the Southern, that body would withdraw all requests at once.

Mr. Hardwick, in miswer, held that there was no real ground for discontent with the Southern Railway, the complaints coming almost wholly from officers of the National T. P. A.; that is, so far as he is aware personally.

While no decisive action resulted from the conference, the statement was made by Mr. Crandall before its close that if the traveling men could secure the

FOR HIRAM CRONK

Body of Last Survivor of War of 1812 Laid to Rest in New York.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) NEW YORK, May 19.—With the blow-ing of "taps," the soldier's farewell to earth, the body of Hiram Cronk, last surviving veteran of America's second war for independence, was laid away yesterday on Victory Hill, Cypress Cemetery, Brooklyn, beside half a hundred of his old comrades in arms, who long ago preceded him.

There was an imposing military escort for the body of the humble soldier as it was taken from the City Hall in this borough, across the bridge and through the Brooklyn streets to the burying

So great was the crowd of persons who wanted to look upon the placid, wrinkled features of the solder who by five years had overlapped a century that the corridor of the City Hall, instead of being closed at 9 o'clock in the morning, was open until within a few minutes of 10 o'clock, when the cortege was scheduled to leave. Even at noon, with the impression that the body was still there, ten thousand persons visited the building.

The convention put in its closing hours to-night hearing reports, one being an additional one from Mr. Wallerstein, of the committee on constitution. An effort to secure an amendment depriving State presidents of the right to vote except in cases of the was defeated. A resolution was adopted, after prolonged debate, under which about $1,000 will be apportioned and remitted to the various divisions and posts, that sum having gone to the credit of the reserve fund under a wrong constitution of the action of the previous convention.

and then the body was borne to the hearse.

Then the funeral procession started, led by ten mounted police, across the bridge. The escort consisted of the Fourteenth Regiment, four hunderd men, in command of Colonel Kline; Squadron C, Major Dehevoise; delegation from U, S. Grant Post, G. A. R.; delegation from the Veteran Corps of the War of 1812, and was followed by the hearse and carriages containing relatives and carriages containing the aldermanic committee, headed by Aldermari Wirth, the chairman.

Arriving in Brooklyn, the funeral procession took its way through Liberty Street, Clinton Street, Flatbush Avenue, Hanson Place, Fulton Street, Greene Avenue and Bushwick Avenue, to Cypress Itill Cemetery. As the line was passing St. Anne's Protestant Episcopal Church, on the Heights, the chimes intoned "America."

on the Heights, the chimes intoned "America."

Many school children looked on, thrilled by the fact that the last of those that had taken part in the second war with Great Britain was passing to his rest. At the cemetery the body was lowered into a grave at Victory Hill. There was a short prayer by Frank Lander Humphrey, chaplain of Grant Post, G. A. R. As "taps" were sounded all present stood with bowed, uncovered heads.

On the steps of the City Hall, as the escort was forming, there was a collequy between Mrs. Morehouse and Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner over the ownership of a flag which Mrs. Morehouse said was hers, while Colonel Gardiner asserted it belonged to his veteran corps, which had it in its possession. Colonel Gardiner stopped the talk by walking away.

The principal speakers were Dr. Morehead, of Salem; Dr. Graybill, of Roanoke; Rev. J. S. W. Neel and Rev. Tyler Frazier, both of Marion. Interesting talks were made by Dr. S. W. Dickinson and Professor F. A. Kelly. The meeting was held out in the country, and was said by a speaker to be the most enthusiastic among the large number he had attended in this end of the State. A Citizens: Improvement Association, with a membership of almost the entire assembly, was organized. A marked feaassembly, was organized. A marked feature of the day was a vote taken in the audience, which showed the people unanimously in favor of raising the taxes for school purposes. Very noteworthy was the sumptuous feast served by the good people in the vicinity of the meetins.

The superintendent, the trustees, the people of Smyth county are aroused. Let the campaign go on.

Yesterday in Waynesboro.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
WAYNESBORO, VA., May 19.—The people of Waynesboro, Wore favored with an educational treat to-day, thanks to the Co-operation Education Commission of Virgina. The meeting was held in the Baptist Church and was largely attended.
The speakers were Professor W. M. Forrest and Dr. C. W. Kent, both of the University of Virginia. Professor Forrest made an eloquent appeal for the education of all classes, emphasizing especially the "school and the State." Dr. Kent's address, in which he spoke chiefly of the value of education to the community, was characteristic of the man—extremely forceful. It was one of the best speeches ever heard in Waynesboro.

HAGUE, VA., May 19.—The Courthouse was filled Wednesday with the representative clitzens of Westmoreland, from all parts of the county, to attend the meeting called in the Interest of public education. A good many of the school trustees and teachers were present. Owing to the sickness of the county superintendent, and by his request, Captain J. H. Candler made some introductory remarks and introduced the speakers. Hon, J. Alston Cabell, of Richmond, entertained the audience for over an hour with a chaste, classical and entertaining address, and he was followed by Dr. R. E. Blackwell, president of Randolph-Macon College, in a forceful speech, emphasizing the present and practical application of the subject. A committee was then appointed to see to the organization of an educational society for the county, whose purpose it shall be to make the public schools more attractive and efficient, and to impress upon the people, especially those not now interested, the great importance of the education of all the children.

right at the meat of his speech by avow right at the ment of his speech by November 1 high his candidacy for the office of Governor of Virginia. He said he was a neighbor of the people of Lynchburg, and that outside of the Fifth District, none stand closer to him than Lynchburg and the countyofCampbell.

Vast Powers of Governor.

Vast Powers of Governor.
"I rejoice at your prosperity," he declared, "and I rejoice in the outlook for this lively city. It is always my pleasure to serve Lynchburg and her people; so I feel as though I am speaking to my friends and neighbors. I stand here as a candidate for what I conceive to be the highest office in the gift of the people of my State. Since a country boy, my ambition has been to be the Governor of the greatest of States. This long cherished ambition has been to me a guiding star.

of the greatest of Sintes. Into long chorished ambition has been to me a guiding star.

"Under the new Constitution the Governor has vast powers and great responsibilities. He appoints all of the boards, who have charge of the public institutions, and these institutions are subject to these appointments. Whether they shall run for the public good or for personal or selfish motives remains largely with the Governor. Aye, he has more power than that, because it is he that appoints the members of the Corporation Commission, which is charged with the regulation of the great railways of the State. With his great nowers, it is well for the people to determine who shall wield them. I want to say that if you are committed to me, and if you think I cannot measure up to these vast responsibilities, that I release you, and you are at liberty to vote otherwise.

"If there is anything in my public or

He said the first and greatest need in duce it."

He said the first and greatest need in Virginia to-day is an active business revival, and opportunity to allow the people of the State to avail themselves of the opportunity presented by the wealth and power the State possesses. He gave an optimistic view of the progress of the State, claiming that all that is needed to give the State a remarkable business is a business administration.

"If I should be Governor." he went on, "all of my efforts will be to do this. My ambition would be to be known as 'the business Governor."

He gave some of his experience as a teacher in a country school, and expressed it as his opinion that this experience had put him in a position to know the greatest needs of the public schools of the rural districts better than either of his competitors. He said if there is a man or a party that is not loyal to the public school system, atrike that man or party down, because they do not deserve support.

"The public schools have brought more blessings to the people of the State than anything else. God speed the cause of popular education, and if I am Governor, you will never have a Governor more loyal to them than I will be.

Single Book List.

Single Book List.

Single Book List.

On the question of text books, Mr. Swanson declared himself in favor of a single list as a general proposition. He thought it would give uniformity in the Siate, and it would enable the people to buy their books for 25 to 50 percent, cheaper than at present, but to adopt the single system right now, he believed, would work a hardship. He said he is opposed to rapid changes, but favored getting to the single list as soon as it can be done without working a hardship on the people.

Touching upon the good roads question, he said he was satisfied that as soon as the campaign is over there will not be a road in Virginia that will not be mandamized and on which loo miles a day can be made, if hot air and paper resolutions will bring such a condition about. He said he had always invored good roads and was in thorough accord with the movement to make them possible. He declared there were only two ways to secure them, viz., not hot air or paper resolutions, but either by the use of money or labor. He favored the working of the convicts in the jails and penitentiary on the roads rather than for private corporations, claiming the State should have the profit from convict work, rather than for it to go to private corporations. He thought it was peculiar that his competitors dian't, while members of the Legislature, prevent this instead of being so much in favor of it now. It is, he thought, also peculiar that they did not see the importance of the school question while in the General side.

that they did not see the importance of the school question while in the General Assembly.

He showed that the first bill ever introduced in Congress for Federal aid for good roads, was not introduced by Mr. Brownlow, but by Major Peter Oley, arguing that he saw eight years ahead of all others what would be necessary, and he thought there is no doubt but Federal aid would certainly come.

He stated that his heart always goes out to the brave Confederate soldier, declaring that if he should be elected Governor he would use his powers to have the State deal generously and not niggardly with these old soldiers.

"Another issue before the people," the Congressman went on, "is the Barksdale pure election law, declaring the need of the day to be less cash and more conscience. He said the Democrats of Virginia have power to save Virginia from corruption methods, declaring the pure election law had made it impossible for a wealthy man to corrupt the voters of the State, and without such a law, the result would be to turn the State over to the corporations and trusts to use it for themselves.

Mr. Swanson closed by paying a great tribute to the part Virginia has had in the making of the nation and to the great men who have made a great name for the State, pleading with his auditors to do all within their power to preserve the high standing of the State.

DR. S. C. CLOPTON ANSWERS THE CALL

Prominent Baptist Minister Passes Away in This City.

WAS LONG A PASTOR HERE

Did Much for Upbuilding of Clay Street, Now Calvary Church.

Rev. Samuel C. Clopton, D. D., died at the Retreat for the Sick yesterday at

Dr. Clopton came to the city about Smithfield, Vá., a very sick man. was hospitably cared for in the home of his devoted friend, Dr. E. J. Mosely, until he was thought to be convalescent, when, at his own urgent request, he was transferred to the Retreat. He preferred that little public notice should be given of his sickness, consequently his death will be a surprise to many of his friends.

Dr. Clopton was the son of Rev. Samuel Cornelius Ciopton, who was the first missionary appointed by the Southern Baptist Board, in 1845. His location was Canton, China. There the subject of this sketch was born. Dr. Clopton's mother was Miss Turpin, daughter of Rev. Miles Turpin. Dr. Clopton grew up in this city, was educated at Richmond College and in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ken-him the honorary degree of doctor of divinity.

He was a man of fine physique and was full of energy. He early gave himself to the work which engaged the heart and hands of his father and grandfather, and became a devoted minister of Jesus Chirist.

He served churches in Richmond, Anniston, Alabama; in Baltimore and in Smithfield, Va. His most notable pastorate was that of the Clay Street Baptist Church, in Richmond, where he served the congregation acceptably for fifteen years. Here he wrought with marvellous prudence and energy, leaving at the end of his pasotrate one of the most harmonious, liberal and successful young churches that Richmond has ever known.

He was regarded as one of the best pastors that ever lived in this city, Vigilant and sympathetic, he was widely known and sloved. The people believed in his piety and trusted him for godiliness and sincerity. He was a member of Otey Battery, and the survivors have been called to attend the funeral.

The missionary spirit never possessed and suled any man more thoroughly than it did Dr. Clopton. To win souls at home and to give the bread of life to the perishing millions of the earth was with him a consuming passion.

About twelve years ago Dr. Clopton married Miss Jones, of Rappahannock county. For geveral years they have made their home in Smithfield, Va., where Dr. Clopton built a new house of worship and organized the work of his field with consumate skill and success. The bereaved family consists of Mrs. Clopton and two children—a boy, eleven years old, and a girl, four years old.

The Clay Street Church (now Calvary) was devoted to its young pastor. He has always held a singularly warm place in its affectionate confidence.

This church will act in the emergency and will do all in its power to honor the memory of its first pastor. The body will be conveyed to the church this morning, and there lie in state to be viewed by friends until the funeral, at 5 o'clock this aftornoon. The exercises will be conducted by Rev. Ryland Knight, the pastor, and several of the life-long friends and associates of the deceased in the ministry.

The Baptist Church at Smithfield, which was devoted to Dr. Ciopton, has been communicated with, and it is expected that a delegation from the church will come to Richmond this morning and will be represented in the conduct of the funeral services.

"Tales" is out to-day. Ask your newsdealer for it. It contains seventeen stories, most of them by authors of world-wide reputation, and all of them great stories. These stories, all in English, are selected from eight different languages. The complete novel is by "Gyp," the famous French novelist of Parisian society. The serial is by Jean Reibrach, a beautiful study of French rural life. The shorter tales are by Maxim Gorky, Ernst von Wolzongen, Anatole France, Baroness von Hevking, Alfred Capus, Emilia Parco Bazan, Mathilde Serao, and nearly a dozen others. "Tales" is the magazine you want.

CINCINNATI. OHIG. May 19.—A. S.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

CINCINNATI, OHIO, May 19.—A. S. Ayres, a telegraph operator, better known as "Patisey" Ayres, celebrated for his fast sending, died yesterday of paralysis, aged fifty years. He was born at Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. Ayres was one of the best known telegraph men in the country. "Patsey," as he was affectionately known to his friends, had followed his profession principally in the Middle West and South, until about 1884, when he went to New York as chief operator for the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company. Later he joined the United Press force. The Publishers' Press then obtained his services as manager of the New York office, and subsequently transferred him to Washington in a similar capacity. Ill health forced his retirement from active work, and several years ago he returned to Cincinnati.

Mr. Ayres was one of the few telegraphers who remained at his post during the yellow fever epidemic at Memphis, some years ago.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

The following resolutions were adopt by Providence M. E. Sabbath School

The following resolutions were adopted by Providence M. E. Sabbath School of York circuit:

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father, in His unerring wisdom, to take out of this world the soul of General Fitzhugh Lee, and
Whereas, Providence Sabbath School, York Circuit, Virginia Conference, wishes to give some expression of its appreciation of the noble worth which characterized his useful life; therefore be it Resolved, ist. That in the death of General Lee our country has lost, not only a Christian soldier, statesman and patriot, but a man, in our judgment, who deservedly stood in the front rank of our great men, and one who, by his lovable disposition and magnetic personality, won the hearts of all who came in touch with him, and as Virginians, we offer this tribute to his memory.
2d. That we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and Christian condolence, and pray that the Lord, who is too good to be unkind, even the Lord of hosts, may sustain them and be their refuge.

3d. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased; a copy be spread upon the minutes of this Sabbath achool, and a copy be sent to The Times-Dispatch for publication.
